Something smells fishy. It was all fun and banter and brotherly love and then oh a bad guy, anger, shoot him in the head and only feel slightly bad about it, and then put the blame on everyone else.. However, it was fun. There's much more I could say, but I'll leave it at that, in the interests of time and space.

Murder and religion collide in this compulsively readable police procedural. Repo man Nick Reid will do anything to retrieve his landlady's stolen Rancho in a wild race across the Mississippi Delta. How does he know all this stuff? This recent "news" reminds me way too much of the movie "The life of David Gale. Her biggest worry is her brother Will, who, at 35, is no longer the successful he has great pacing and enough skill as a voice artist to give the many characters sufficiently unique voices.
