The sharp focus on the various arguments The Monadology other justifications Leibniz puts forward makes possible a deeper and more sympathetic understanding of his doctrines. By the power of our own mind, we discover what is behind the power of anything that exists in the universe, which is of course God. Now, according to Leibniz, clear knowledge means being able to recognize something. This is what is meant by an innate idea or an innate truth. The monad is defined by what describes it, using subject The Monadology logic. The consequences that Leibniz draws from the logical conception of substance and the doctrine of marks and traces are remarkable. There can be more than one monad because they are unique. Second, if matter is simply extension, then there is in its nature no source of activity.
