Virtually every modern narrative film employs this editing technique to create a story. James began having mini-epiphanies about himself and the world around him in nearly every chapter.

Certainly not in place of drawing all the other elements from the character himself.

I had a goal to self-publish my novel by the end of the year and I knew I needed some heavy revisions before I could send it to the editor. Now, determined to find their audience and another way to the silver screen, some screenwriters are turning to novelization. So, what do you think?

I broke my reins and ran into the darkness screaming bloody murder. He has designed adaptation is a fine balance of crafting a new story from an original one, all while respecting the author, the reader, and the filmgoers. Remember what happened after character A saw character B with another woman?
